

An asset to Wellington's waterfront is the possibility of creating a continuous promenade along the water.

Te Papa is the main cultural institution in Wellington and on the waterfront offering various experiences at different levels.

Water activities are a natural part of a waterfront and could be developed further.

City-to-Sea Bridge offers a direct link from the city to the waterfront.

Queens Wharf represents an important node on the waterfront offering possibilities for a multitude of activities.

Multiple activities are carried out along the waterfront, where cycling, rollerblading, walking, jogging, playing, resting etc. takes place side by side.

Frank Kitts playground is a well-visited site on the waterfront where families with children spend time.

Resting options along the waterfront, enjoying the sun and talking to friends and relatives are popular ways of spending time.

Oriental Bay is a recreational lung close to the city used by many age groups.