

Today

Author: Emma Whitlow

Today the wind is a gentle breeze rustling
in the trees
blowing the leaves to the ground

never making a sound

children walk and
stir them up
with a crunching sound

like Skippy Cornflakes with a snap crackle and pop dancing around

they don't stop

the breeze in Wellington doesn't last long and quickly
changes tune
like a song

knocking children off their feet and blowing recycling down our street the gentle breeze is gone for now so we better head home
