

Egmont street – a celebration of Wellington

UPDATE 5
08 July 2016

We have completed the painting works and finishing the last section of resurfacing this weekend. The honey comb planter extension and street light installation is progressing as scheduled and a couple of touch ups of civil work will take place before planting starts in two weeks time. Some jobs are weather dependent which means if it is really cold or wet, we may have to alter what we do and when.

If you have any concerns please get in touch with us on 04 499 4444 or urbandesign@wcc.govt.nz

→ The works

Final section of resurfacing work in Ghuznee Street end of Egmont Street is commencing on Saturday 09/07/2016. This work will close the access entry from Ghuznee Street, but all access through Egmont Street, including iDEAL carpark will be accessible from Dixon Street entrance. Pedestrians will still have full access to Egmont Street, however drive through access will not be available from one end to the other. The Honey comb planter extension and street light installation is well into progress, you can spot some of the new lights already lighting Egmont Street for a brighter and safer environment. Design elements including planters and greening of the street will come in a couple of weeks towards the end of July.

→ Safety and access

Our work hours will be from 7.30am - 5pm, during this time there will be some disruption and changes to access. The lane will remain open and we will have traffic management in place to allow both pedestrian and vehicle movements. We apologise for any inconvenience that this may cause. Please get in touch with us if you have any major deliveries to your home or business and we will work around them.
